Notice of Funding Opportunity

Funding Opportunity Title: FY2023 U.S. Consulate Fukuoka: High-Tech Labor Force Curriculum Development Workshop
Funding Opportunity Number: FUKUOKA-PAS-FY23-02
Deadline for Applications: February 19, 2023 (by 11:59 pm JST)
Assistance Listing Number: 19.040 – Public Diplomacy Programs
Total Amount Available: $50,000

A. PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

U.S. Consulate Fukuoka's Public Affairs Section announces an open competition for organizations to submit applications to carry out a program to train Japanese universities on how to create curriculum focused on training students to be successful in STEM fields critical to the modern international economy, with a specific focus on the semiconductor industry. Please follow all instructions below.

1. Priority Region: Japan (Kyushu area)

2. Program Objectives:

The goal of this program is to advance American prosperity and economic security, including through global and regional cooperation.

In a push to reduce Japan's reliance on foreign sources in manufacturing supply chains and address semiconductor shortages, since 2021 the Japanese government has identified the revitalization of the semiconductor industry as a key pillar in bolstering its economic security. Epitomizing this effort, the Government of Japan has committed up to 400 billion yen ($2.8 billion) to support the development of Taiwan based TSMC's one trillion yen ($6.8 billion) Japan chip plant, which is a joint venture with Sony Semiconductor and Denso Corporation in Japan's southwestern region of Kyushu. Described as a once in a generation project, Kyushu Financial Group announced an expected 1.8 trillion yen ($12.3 billion) economic impact within the first two years of the factory's operations. However, persistent labor shortages, particularly among skilled workers, have somewhat tempered optimism about the project's immediate impact, and Japan's semiconductor-related industrial base remains heavily reliant on imports from Taiwan, among other countries. Growing the global talent pool at all levels would avoid unhealthy competition for human resources and instead strengthen the talent base in countries committed to democratic principles, the rule of law, and, especially for Japan, ensuring a free and open Indo-Pacific.

Labor shortages are expected to be a major bottleneck the further revitalization of the semiconductor industry. This training workshop will help ensure American universities with expertise in relations with the private sector can help Japanese educational institutions develop appropriate curriculum for students to be successful in high-tech fields necessary to securing global supply chains. One Kyushu-based university has even announced it will soon launch a new Semiconductor Department, which plans to launch in 2024 to train a high-tech labor force to support new factories being built in the area.

This grant will go to fund an organization to train Japanese educators on how to create curriculum focused on training students to be successful in STEM fields critical to the modern international economy, with a specific focus on the semiconductor industry. This will consist of a two-day in-person workshop in Japan focused on how educational institutions can coordinate with and develop curriculum that serves the need of high-tech manufacturers. The workshop will cover topics such as: establishing technical courses that meet industries' needs, business and process management in tech, effective coordination with manufacturers and government, and developing security processes to prevent illicit technology transfer. The workshop should also include a discussion of DEIA principles in tech in the U.S. today, especially the role of promoting gender equality.

The program should also include a one or two-day preliminary online workshop held several months before the in-person workshop in which Japanese educational institutions, government officials, and representatives from industry are given the opportunity to help shape the training by doing a self-assessment on their needs and receiving information from American educational institutions on what they are doing to meet the needs of modern industry.

Regarding the target audience, the U.S. Consulate in Fukuoka will help recruit attendees from Kyushu's universities, representatives from companies in the semiconductor industry, and relevant local and prefectural government representatives to attend both the online and in-person sessions. We estimate around 20 attendees from these institutions.

Proposals should include all costs associated with implementing the in-person AND online programs including:

- Costs to implement two-day ‘in-person’ workshop in a City in the Kyushu region (e.g. Fukuoka or Kumamoto) including: (1) costs to hire American trainers and other staff including their travel costs (such as international airfare between the United States and Japan, domestic travel expenses from/to international arrival/departure airport to/from the program venue in Japan, lodging in Japan, meals and incidentals, and other miscellaneous costs); (2) costs to hire English-Japanese interpreters; (3) rental costs of workshop venue; (4) costs of necessary equipment to conduct the workshop (e.g. rental costs of microphones, computer projector, screen, clicker etc., and hiring of audio-visual technicians); (5) costs to provide lunch to all attendees and interpreters for two days; (6) costs to set up an online RSVP method to accept sign-up from prospective attendees, responding to their registration and inquiries, and to make the attendee list; (7) costs to recruit other trainers/speakers/moderators from institutions other than the grantee’s organization; (9) any other necessary costs.
- Costs to implement a one or two-day preliminary online workshop which will be held several months before the two-day in-person workshop in Kyushu including: (1) costs to hire American trainers and other staff; (2) costs to hire English-Japanese interpreters; (3) costs to use the online platform (e.g. Zoom); (4) costs of necessary equipment to conduct the online workshop (e.g. costs of hiring audio-visual technicians, if necessary); (5) costs to set up an online RSVP method to accept sign-up from prospective attendees, responding to their registration and inquiries, and to make attendee list; (6) costs to recruit other trainers/speakers/moderator from institutions other than the grantee’s organization; (8) any other necessary costs
- Costs to prepare for and upload Japanese-language reports on the gist of the online and in-person workshop for the people who attended and those who couldn’t attend to read later (Note: In case the grantee would upload a video of the workshop, the grantee is responsible for paying for any surcharges for a Japanese translation for online use as a secondary purpose.)

3. Participants and Audiences:

The target audiences of the online and in-person workshop are: Professors and administrative staff at Japanese educational institutions (such as Kumamoto University, Kyushu University, Kyushu Institute of Technology, and others); Japanese prefectural and local government officials (such as officials at the Kyushu office of the Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry), prefectural and city government officials in areas with a significant presence of semiconductor-related companies, representatives from the semiconductor industry; and representatives from the business sector.

Under the law, it is mandatory to register in SAM.gov.

Starting April 2022, the UEI will be assigned when an organization registers or renews its registration in SAM.gov at www.SAM.gov.
